What Is the Attack Phase?

The Attack Phase is the first and most intense stage of the Dukan Diet. It lasts anywhere from 3 to 7 days, depending on your weight loss goals and current body mass. During this phase, your focus is on consuming a high-protein diet while cutting out most fats, carbs, and sugars. The goal? Rapidly deplete your body's glycogen stores and kickstart a fat burning mode.

Think of it as a "reset" period: you're giving your body a clean slate to shed excess water weight and begin burning stored fat. By limiting carbohydrate intake to a few grams per day, you force your liver to convert stored glycogen into glucose, which is then used for energy. As glycogen depletes, the body turns to fat stores, producing ketones that become a new fuel source.

Why the Attack Phase Matters

Many people try to lose weight by cutting calories or eating "diet" foods, but the Attack Phase offers a different advantage: speed and sustainability. Here's why:

- Rapid Initial Weight Loss – Most participants see a drop of 2–5 pounds in the first week.
- Water Weight Reduction – Cutting carbs reduces water retention, making you feel lighter.
- Metabolic Shift – The body quickly enters a fat burning state, which can carry over into later phases.
- Clear Guidelines – The strict protein focus eliminates decision fatigue over food choices.

Core Principles of the Attack Phase

While the Attack Phase sounds simple, it follows a set of clear rules that ensure safety and effectiveness. Below are the core principles you should keep in mind:

1. High Protein Intake – Aim for 120–200 grams of protein per day. This can be from lean meats, fish, eggs, and low fat dairy.
2. Limited Carbohydrates – Only 1–2 grams of carbs per day, usually from a small portion of low fat dairy.
3. Zero Fat – All dietary fat is excluded. This includes oils, butter, and high fat dairy.
4. Hydration – Drink at least 2–3 liters of water daily to support metabolism and kidney function.
5. Regular Meals – Eat 3–4 protein meals per day, spaced evenly to maintain energy levels.
6. No Supplements – Avoid protein powders or supplements during the Attack Phase to keep the diet natural.

Structuring Your Attack Phase Meals

Meal planning is essential for staying on track and avoiding cravings. Below is a sample daily meal structure that adheres to the Attack Phase guidelines:

1. Breakfast – 2 hard boiled eggs + 1 cup skim milk (or a small portion of low fat yogurt).
2. Mid Morning Snack – 1 cup low fat cottage cheese.
3. Lunch – 150 grams grilled chicken breast + 1 cup skim milk.
4. Afternoon Snack – 1 cup low fat Greek yogurt.
5. Dinner – 200 grams baked salmon + 1 cup skim milk.

Feel free to swap protein sources (turkey, lean beef, tofu, or tempeh) and dairy options (skim milk, low fat yogurt, or cottage cheese). The key is to keep the protein portion large and the fat portion zero.

Dukan Diet Recipes for the Attack Phase

While the Attack Phase restricts many foods, you can still enjoy flavorful meals by focusing on protein rich, low fat ingredients. Below are five mouth watering recipes that fit the Attack Phase criteria.

1. Lemon Herb Grilled Chicken

- Ingredients: 200g skinless chicken breast, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 1 teaspoon dried oregano, 1 teaspoon dried thyme, 1 teaspoon garlic powder, salt to taste.
- Instructions: Marinate chicken in lemon juice, herbs, garlic powder, and salt for 30 minutes. Grill over medium heat for 6–8 minutes per side until fully cooked. Serve with a side of 1 cup skim milk.

2. Baked Cod with Dill

- Ingredients: 200g cod fillet, 1 tablespoon fresh dill (or 1 teaspoon dried), 1 tablespoon lemon juice, salt, pepper.
- Instructions: Season cod with dill, lemon juice, salt, and pepper. Bake at 180°C (350°F) for 12–15 minutes. Pair with 1 cup low fat Greek yogurt for a creamy contrast.

3. Egg White Omelette with Spinach

- Ingredients: 4 egg whites, 1 cup fresh spinach, 1 teaspoon onion powder, salt, pepper.
- Instructions: Whisk egg whites with onion powder, salt, and pepper. Pour into a non stick skillet, add spinach, and cook until set. Serve with 1 cup skim milk.

4. Turkey Stir Fry (Protein Only)

- Ingredients: 200g ground turkey, 1 tablespoon soy sauce (low sodium), 1 teaspoon ginger powder, 1 teaspoon garlic powder, 1 cup sliced mushrooms.
- Instructions: Cook turkey in a pan until browned. Add mushrooms, ginger, garlic, and soy sauce. Stir until fully cooked. Enjoy with 1 cup low fat cottage cheese.

5. Greek Yogurt “Pudding” with Berries

- Ingredients: 1 cup unsweetened Greek yogurt, 1 cup mixed berries (strawberries, blueberries, raspberries), 1 teaspoon vanilla extract.
- Instructions: Mix all ingredients until smooth. Chill for 30 minutes before serving. This snack satisfies sweet cravings without breaking the Attack Phase.

Tips & Tricks for Success

Sticking to the Attack Phase can be challenging, especially if you’re used to a varied diet. Here are some practical strategies to make the transition smoother:

- Plan Ahead – Prepare protein portions in bulk (e.g., grill a batch of chicken or bake several salmon fillets) to reduce daily cooking time.
- Keep Snacks Handy – Have low fat dairy options like cottage cheese or Greek yogurt ready for quick snacking.
- Hydrate Relentlessly – Aim for at least 2.5 liters of water daily. Adding a slice of lemon or cucumber can enhance flavor.
- Use Flavorful Herbs – Spice up meals with herbs like oregano, thyme, dill, and parsley. These add taste without extra carbs.
- Track Progress – Keep a food journal or use a mobile app to record protein intake, ensuring you hit your daily target.
- Stay Active – Light exercise (e.g., brisk walking or yoga) can help maintain muscle mass during the high protein phase.

Frequently Asked Questions

1. Can I eat fruit during the Attack Phase?

No. Fruit is high in natural sugars and carbs, which are restricted during the Attack Phase. Save fruit for the later phases.

2. Is it safe to follow the Attack Phase for more than 7 days?

It’s not recommended. The Attack Phase is designed for a short period to kickstart weight loss. Prolonging it can lead to nutrient deficiencies.

3. How do I avoid feeling hungry?

Protein is satiating. Eating 120–200 grams of protein per day, combined with adequate hydration, will keep hunger at bay.

4. Can I use protein powder during the Attack Phase?

Not during the Attack Phase. Protein powders often contain added carbs or fats. Stick to whole food sources.

5. What if I’m lactose intolerant?

Choose lactose free dairy alternatives like lactose free milk or yogurt. Alternatively, use lean meats and eggs exclusively.

Conclusion

The Dukan Diet Attack Phase is a powerful, science based method for igniting rapid weight loss. By focusing on high protein, low carbohydrate meals and eliminating fats, you create a metabolic environment that encourages the body to burn stored fat efficiently. While the phase is restrictive, the recipes provided here demonstrate that you can still enjoy delicious, satisfying meals that fit the guidelines. Remember to stay hydrated, keep protein intake high, and plan meals ahead to stay on track.

Once you've completed the Attack Phase, you'll be ready to transition into the Cruise, Plateau, and Cruise Final phases, each designed to help you maintain your new weight and build healthy habits. Embrace the journey, stay consistent, and enjoy the transformative results of the Dukan Diet.
