Pronunciation Guide

Four Tones

Mandarin has four main tones plus a neutral tone. Mastering them is essential because a wrong tone can change the meaning entirely.

1. First tone: high and level (e.g., m “mother”).
2. Second tone: rising, like asking a question (e.g., má “hemp”).
3. Third tone: falling rising, a dip (e.g., m â “horse”).
4. Fourth tone: sharp falling, like giving a command (e.g., mà “scold”).
5. Neutral tone: light and quick (e.g., ma “question particle”).

In O`Y} uses the third tone, and h æð uses the third tone as well.

Practice Exercises

To improve your tone accuracy, try the following drills:

- Record yourself saying each tone and compare it to native speakers.
- Use tone matching apps that provide instant feedback.
- Practice with a language partner, focusing on tone changes in conversation.

Using a casual greeting with a senior person can be seen as disrespectful. When in doubt, use ä½Y} add the person’s title.
