Playing Techniques to Add Color

Once you’ve nailed the basic chord progression, you can spice up the song with a few advanced techniques. These additions will give your performance a professional feel without overcomplicating the arrangement.

1. Hammer On and Pull Off

During the chorus, add a hammer on on the G string at the second fret, then pull it off to the open string. This subtle embellishment creates a melodic flourish that mimics the song's vocal line.

2. Arpeggiated Chords

Instead of strumming the entire chord, try plucking each string individually in a descending pattern: G C E A. This technique is especially effective in the intro and outro, giving the song a gentle, finger style feel.

3. Slide and Glissando

Use a slide from the third to the first fret on the G string during the bridge. This adds a bluesy texture that contrasts nicely with the otherwise pop centric arrangement.
